

Individual
April 7, 2016

Paul Zuger

Paul is a retired environmental professional, having served 31 years with the Michigan Departments of Natural Resources and Environmental Quality. He has extensive experience managing a wide range of state programs to protect Michigan's environment, including nine years as chief of the Surface Water Quality Division. During his public service, Paul was instrumental in establishing protective water quality discharge limits for industrial and municipal discharges.

Since retiring he has served as an independent contractor and affiliated consultant. He recently served as the environmental policy advisor to Michigan United Conservation Clubs. He has also used his expertise to help impoverished communities abroad by volunteering with Engineers Without Borders.